

Facts Sheet: I Feel That Completely

Title of series: I Feel That Completely

Genre: Dark Comedy

Logline: A deranged narcissist who disguises her manipulative behavior through a veil of new age spiritualism and self help BS struggles to maintain sanity as her entire social circle begins to catch on to her grift and call her out.

Tagline: A crazy girl's guide to getting so much worse

Number of episodes: 3

Short synopsis: Maude Moore thinks she has it all figured out: posing as a self-proclaimed “empath” with a love for astrology and therapy in order to emotionally terrorize anyone and everyone who comes into her orbit. That is, until everyone in her life begins to wake up to her facade and decides not to put up with it any longer. As the rug gets pulled out from under her, Maude must fight tooth and nail to keep hold of the slivers of social credit she has left—and to abuse them to their fullest extent while she still can.

Long synopsis: Maude Moore gets her kicks causing chaos. A textbook narcissist with a main character complex to end all main character complexes, Maude thinks that it's her world and we're all just living in it—but she'd never let anyone know it. To keep in her social world's good graces, she poses herself as a therapy-loving, tarot-reading, perpetually meditating empath. With just a bit of patchouli oil and some elbow grease, Maude has friends and lovers wrapped around her finger. That is, until one of her dates cuts things off. And then an old ex gets in contact, asking for closure and an apology. And her charm starts to wear off on her roommate. Slowly, then all at once, everyone starts to call bull on her schtick. As Maude's world begins to crumble around her, she desperately grasps on to the sliver of power she has left and tries to milk it for all its worth. All is eventually lost as Maude learns the hard way that she's been publicly called out online—and everyone's seen it but her. In one final push, Maude takes to instagram live in an attempt to dig herself out, but only falls deeper into her own delusion.

Episodes

Episode 1: “I’m Definitely the Problem”

- One-liner: Maude gets dumped by one lover and confronted by another.
- Three-liner: Maude loses a lover. Penny's mom comes to town. Brunch gets awkward.

Episode 2: “The Boystown Bitch”

- One-liner: Feeling low after a bad date, Maude joins Penny at a house show and discovers a reason to feel even lower.
- Three-liner: Maude goes on a date with a “normal” guy. Cameron's band has a big show. Maude goes viral.

Episode 3: “Heal-O-Rama!”

- One-liner: Maude takes to instagram live to “apologize” for her actions.
- Three-liner: Maude takes to instagram live to set the record straight. What starts as an apology turns into anything but. The crowd goes wild.

Production Team

Writer: Tess Lincecum

Director: Chloe Zarensky Werner

DP: Amaryllis Velasquez

Main Cast: Tess Lincecum, Layla Walcott,
Carl Donovan Collins

Editor: Alec Peterson

1st AD: Abigail R. Griffith

1st AC: Evy Apostolou

Gaffer: Jason Barnett-Miller

Creator Bios

Tess Lincecum (written by, starring) is a writer and comedian living in Los Angeles. Raised in Madison, Wisconsin, she came up in Chicago, attending DePaul University’s School of Cinematic Arts and performing comedy around the city. As a writer, Lincecum is whip smart and punchy, with a propensity for exploring dark subject matter with a goofy bent. As a performer, she’s embodied and expressive. Lincecum combines a child-like sense of play with an exacting eye for culture that makes for a razor-sharp yet unpretentious approach to her comedy. I Feel That Completely, her debut web series, is a monument to the creative ideas that make her tick: construction of identity in the age of social media, the horrors of codependent female friendship, and self-obsessed delusions of grandeur. She hopes you like it, otherwise this would be so awkward for the both of you.

Chloe Zarensky Werner (director) is a director, writer, and comedian currently based in Chicago. Coming from New York City (okay you caught me, JUST outside of New York City) Chloe completed her BFA in directing at Depaul University’s School of Cinematic Arts and made a name for herself in the Chicago comedy scene with unique story driven performances at Second City, The Annoyance, The Lincoln Lodge and more. Her filmmaking sensibilities rely on offbeat humor, the erotic awkwardness of sex and sexuality, and primal desire in order to curate a singular experience for her audience. I Feel That Completely is Chloe’s first (completed) web series and biggest project to date. Shot in 2022 and premiering in 2024, I Feel That Completely is older than some people’s children.